ABSTRACT

Based upon data gathered annually by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC), this directory provides information on 1,233 community, junior, and technical colleges in the United States and its territories, including 1975 and 1976 statistics on enrollments and personnel. Following introductory material on the purposes of the directory, a data summary, suggestions for interpreting the data, and a list of changes in institutions since the previous year are presented. Next, the directory lists each two-year college alphabetically by state or country and provides the following information: location; chief executive officer; telephone number; year college classes began; type of control or affiliation; AACJC membership; accrediting agency; type of academic calendar; October 1975 and 1976 full- and part-time and total enrollments; community education enrollments 1975-76; full- and part-time and total faculty, professional staff, and administrators as of October 1976; and tuition and fees required in 1976-77. Next, tables are presented summarizing enrollment and personnel data by state for all institutions and for public and independent junior colleges. Following a table showing distribution of size of enrollment in two-year colleges, the directory concludes with lists of community, junior, and technical college organizations and state administrators for two-year college education, and an alphabetical listing of colleges. ## INTRODUCTION

How many persons are enrolled in America's community, junior and technical colleges? Of the total, what is the breakdown between full-time and part-time students? What is the teaching capacity of the institutions—in terms of numbers of faculty? How much does it cost to attend the colleges?

Answers to these and other questions are provided in the 1977 edition of the Community, Junior, and Technical College Directory. This volume, as has been the case with previous editions, is designed to provide information that will give some indication of enrollment and staffing trends and patterns in community-based two-year institutions of postsecondary education, as well as other basic data. Collection, analysis and dissemination of the data contained herein hopefully will prove helpful to member institutions of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges in planning and development. This work is carried out primarily as a service to members of the Association—but we feel certain that the data will also be useful to local, state and federal educational planners as they make decisions about meeting present and future learning needs.

One fact that emerges from the data is that community, junior and technical colleges showed a smaller percentage increase in enrollment in 1976 than for many years. In fact, compared with the high 1975 increase of more than 15 percent, growth in 1976 was slight, indeed. This was not unexpected, of course, as state purse strings were tightened in terms of support for two-year colleges and veterans' enrollments decreased by more than 200,000. Moreover, the numbers of persons in the traditional college age market has decreased in recent years. While the latter factor is not as significant for community colleges as for four-year institutions—since the average age of students in the two-year institutions is about 30—it nonetheless has considerable impact.

Incidentally, figures for community education enrollments contained in the Directory would seem to bear out the frequently stated commitment of the institutions to service to community beyond formal or traditional programming. Data on community education are included for the second time.

The annual enrollment survey reflected in the Directory is one of a number conducted by the Association each year. During 1976, we have formalized a research office which has as its job that of collecting data concerned with the organization's own work and projects, reviewing, analyzing and disseminating data from government and other sources, and monitoring research on community college education emanating from still other sources. Some 10 fact sheets on community colleges have been released by the research office in recent months. We shall continue to give attention to data collection and reporting in 1977.

Persons using the Directory will note that the information it contains goes beyond the listing of colleges and data about them. The publication contains names and addresses of state directors of community and junior college education and information on state and regional organizations of two-year institutions. Not an AACJC membership directory per se, the book includes names and data for many nonprofit colleges that do not hold membership in addition to those which are a part of the Association. Effort has been made to make the publication as comprehensive as possible by including nonprofit postsecondary educational institutions that are organized on a two-year basis, have state recognition and/or regional accreditation, and offer two-year associate degree programs. The Directory does not include information on proprietary institutions.

While relying on the colleges covered in the survey for accuracy of the information, staff have attempted where possible to clarify and correct questionnaires when there appeared to be errors. The reporting colleges have been extremely helpful and cooperative. We believe the final results reflect that spirit.

The Data/Some Interpretations

Last year enrollments in public and private two-year colleges registered the largest yearly increase since 1968, growing 15 percent in one year, and reflecting the attendance of more women, veterans, older students, and minorities. This year, while two-year colleges continue to attract substantial numbers from these new groups, the enrollment increase was less than one percent.

In the fall of 1975 community and junior colleges, technical institutes, and two-year branches of four-year colleges enrolled a headcount total of 4,069,279. As of October 1976, the headcount total was 4,084,976. Public two-year colleges enrolled 3,939,173, an increase of 0.4 percent and independent colleges enrolled 145,803, a decrease of 1.3 percent.

As might have been expected, two-year college enrollments have leveled off in the 1970's after the boom years of the previous decade. This stabilization is reflected in the lessening average yearly increases during the early part of the decade. Beginning in 1974, the nation's two-year colleges enrolled a larger number of students as a result of emphasis on community service. While this market of non-traditional students will undoubtedly continue to expand, growth may be offset by a leveling off and even a diminution of registrations by the more traditional college age population.

Another explanation for the decline in growth this year is the diminishing veteran enrollment. In the fall of 1975 a total of 617,227 veterans were enrolled in two-year colleges; this fall, according to the Veterans Administration, the population enrolled in two-year colleges fell to 394,679, a loss of over 222,000.

Other causes for this year's slackened growth are increases in yearly tuition and fees—a change most noticeable in the City University of New York system of community colleges—continued effects of last year's enrollment limitations, and cuts in educational operating funds.

Although enrollments are down at some colleges, this is by no means true for others. Many institutions show gains resulting from increased recruiting, new programs, and the opening of new learning centers.

It is also interesting that the two-year college sector, both public and private, is enrolling an increasing share of all postsecondary students, from 26 percent of all students enrolled in higher education in 1970 to an estimated 36 percent in 1976.

Community education, or noncredit, enrollments have also increased from a total of 1,337,267 reported last year for the opening fall term. This year, however, the reporting period for these enrollments was changed from the opening fall term to the period from July 1, 1975 to June 30, 1976.

Directory data for this year, in addition to illustrating the wide variation in enrollment growth rates, includes information on faculty, staff, and administration. The total number of faculty increased from 181,260 to 199,691 (10.2 percent); administrative staff from 15,488 to 15,653 (1.1 percent); and professional support staff from 11,537 to 13,180 (14.2 percent).

Data shown in Table I by institution are summarized in Tables II, III, IV, and V, beginning on page 91. It should be noted in these summary tables that the full-time and part-time enrollment data do not add to the total enrollment because some colleges have not broken out their total headcount figure. This may also occur in some cases with reported faculty data.

As in the past, enrollment and other data are requested for each separate unit of an institution. However, throughout Table I there are instances where this information is reported not by campus but by the main college or district.

Also note that the opening fall enrollment for 1975 was reported in the 1976 edition of the Directory as 4,069,279. The 1975 total appearing in this year's edition will differ from that total because corrections, additions, and deletions have been made since last year.

Data reported in the following tables are taken from forms received directly from the colleges. AACJC has relied on these reports for accurate data in each category. Approximately 75 colleges and campuses did not report current fall enrollments. In these entries the total enrollment appearing in the fall 1976 column in Table I is the same as the total appearing in the fall 1975 column.

Additional information, giving enrollment, faculty, staff, and administrative data by sex, average tuition and required fees by state and by type of control, and degrees and certificates granted in 1975-76 will be available later in the year.

Changes in Institutions Since the 1976 Directory

Became Four-Year Colleges

Michigan—Concordia Lutheran Junior College; Mississippi—Southeastern Baptist College, Westminster College; New Jersey—Centenary College for Women; Pennsylvania—Robert Morris College, Spring Garden College; Virginia—Bluefield College; Puerto Rico—Humacao Regional College of the University of Puerto Rico; Other Countries—American College in Paris.
